The True Story of Combat Tracker Teams in the Vietnam War

Five men and one Labrador retriever – trained by the world’s best to find the “Elusive Enemy” in the jungles of Vietnam

Seek On! is the true story of the young Americans who volunteered to become the first response to finding elusive, fleeing terrorists and NVA, who were waging asymmetric warfare in Southeast Asia.

The teams were trained at the Jungle Warfare School in Malaysia initially, and took that superb training to the fight. They were able to find and fix the enemy; gather intel and retrieve friendlies. These are their stories – not the “official papers.” Learn what they went through as their NZ SAS trainers “treated” them to the same training as they had received. When “in-country,” read what it was like juggling their survival between the enemy and their own support, so they didn’t get ambushed in between them. Imagine what they felt as a K9 became a complete member of their team.

After their service, known as the men who could “walk on water,” they were separated and told that “this never happened.” There were no ceremonies; many had no access to necessary documents for the VA; medals were unavailable that were won. Most of all, they lost each other – men who were closer than brothers. That has been rectified. This is their story, and that of their Labs and instructors, and crazy days and nights when the clock still ticked. SEEK ON!
